

INDIA HIGHER EDUCATION RESEARCH NETWORK (IHERN)

presents...

HIGHER EDUCATION RESEARCH WEBINAR SERIES

“Introducing the Emerging ‘Components Toward an Indigenous Inclusive College Readiness Framework’ for Tribal Youth in India- Plus, Steps Forward”

The long-term project on tribal youth and college students in Odisha and Jharkhand firstly aims to understand what it means for them to be ‘college ready’, and secondly, to enable them to leverage that knowledge towards building a bridge program between tribal communities and colleges, while accounting for their academic, psychological and social needs.

Matthew A Witenstein

Matthew A Witenstein is Associate Professor of Educational Leadership and Policy and Program Coordinator of the Education Leadership Program at University of New Mexico (UNM). He also serves as a Senior Research Fellow, School of Educational Studies at Claremont Graduate University. His US work focuses on immigrants in higher education and international educational experiences while his international/comparative education research focuses on higher education quality, organization and governance issues.

Anthony J. Chipre

Anthony J. Chipre is a current EdD student at the University of New Mexico and holds a M.S. in Chemistry from Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois. He currently works in the field of K-12 education where he has spent the past twelve years as a STEM instructor, instructional coach, district leader and youth mentor. Notably he is the founder of a community-based boxing program that provides after school programming for youth in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

 Meet Link

 Fri, 29 May 26'

 10:30 AM IST